Society is the regularities, customs and ground rules of human behavior and it always prompts the perception of any individual. Knowing a culture is tremendously important to know how humans act and interact with each other. Even to Judge someone we must be aware of how their society works and how it judges people. Humans always tend to stick to a group and perceive things objectively depending on what their society taught.

People from different societies have very different beliefs and systems of belief. The practices and behavior of other societies often are jarring, to one another and even the most adept social relativist is not immune to this social shock. Social shock is the surprise, disorientation, and fear people can experience when they encounter a new culture. Mixing up of societies would result in a change that might end up the concept of caste, religion and language barrier and also by discussing philosophies of society that are totally contradictory to each other, We might philosophize to console ourselves, or the reverse: to test our intellectual fortitude, our ability to face hard truths, or even hard falsehoods taken as true.

-You are expected to cross the threshold of a society or place which is completely contradictory to the distinctive culture and institutions of your society.

-Try to bring out your perception and attitudes towards that place and try to narrate the paradox of yourself and your emotional interpretation of the place.

-Soft copies should be mailed before 25 August 2018 to submission@acearch.in

-You can also accompany sketches/story boards
